Men's Season Cancelled

According to Sports Information Coordinator Dave Fanno, forming a new men's basketball program to be ready for play next season will be difficult but it's not impossible.

"We have to turn this around as fast as we can. It's definitely a black-eye on the athletic program," said Fanno.

Fanno doesn't believe there will be any sanctions or penalties placed on the university, and Staci Schottman, a spokesperson for the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, said the situation at PUC is a rare circumstance in the NAIA and specific rules are at the discretion of the institute.

"We've already policed ourselves and I think the NAIA will be satisfied with what we've done," said Fanno.

The uproar began only days after Christmas when the remainder of the 2006-2007 men's basketball season was cancelled due to the academic ineligibility of eight of the thirteen Peregrines. Those eight will be unable to play during the spring semester.

According to Fanno, in order to be academically eligible a student-athlete must complete 12 credit hours and hold a GPA of at least a 2.0 average.

The ineligibility, following two season-ending injuries, has driven the discontinuance of the PUC men's season as well as the resignations of Head Coach Mike James and assistant coaches Derron Evans and Drew Fountain.

Further internal investigations into the men's basketball program have uncovered that three players competed last fall despite failing to satisfy the academic requirements, resulting in the forfeit of its eight victories earlier in the season as well as the resignation of Rob Jensen, assistant vice chancellor of health, recreation and sports.

Jensen, who has headed the program for the last five years, accepted responsibility for using poor judgment in responding to issues related to the eligibility of the athletes.

John Friend, the former PUC athletics director whom Jensen succeeded, has agreed to serve as an athletic consultant to the university from Jan. 16 through July 31 in his place.

"Rob Jensen did an excellent job in my opinion, but the

After the discontinuance of the men's basketball season, players are left with next to nothing at PUC - all without a sport and some without a place to stay.

"It's frustrating waking up and knowing that something that was part of your daily routine is now gone," said sophomore Mark McCord, who was sidelined this season due to injuries.

The team heard about the cancellation the day before they were scheduled to play IUN. Former Head Coach Mike James came to practice and gathered the team to tell them the season was over due to academic ineligibility. The team and coaching staff walked out of the gym silent and in disbelief.

"Some of them looked like they didn't care," said Sports Information Coordinator Dave Fanno.

Some players also lost their scholarships.

"The scholarships for those eligible to play will remain intact and their residency will not be in jeopardy," said Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Melinda Dalgarn.

Ineligible players will lose their scholarships for the remainder of the academic year.

Because scholarships were taken away from those ineligible, their residencies at the village were also taken away. Now some players are left with no place to stay and no money to pay for school.

"I wouldn't doubt if some of them transfer," said Fanno.

It isn't certain if either the eligible or ineligible students will return next year to play.

"I have a gut feeling that some may play for Calumet College next year," said Harry Tustison, team manager.

Junior center Kevin Thomas, who maintained his eligibility, is considering the possibility of transferring to Northern Illinois University to play football.

"It's been a dream to play football, but we'll see," said Thomas. "This whole thing is just embarrassing."

"It came down to player responsibility," said Fanno. "As

Third computer theft prompts $10,000 reward offer from PUC

Computer equipment and other objects were taken from the CLO, Gyte-Annex and Anderson buildings on Sunday, Jan. 7.

The objects were allegedly stolen from laboratories connected to the school of education. Other objects, such as furniture were reported to be damaged. A fire alarm was allegedly pulled to divert the attention of campus police.

Police Chief Stephen Chaddock refused comment.

This crime is not the first instance of computer theft on campus recently. Last fall, there were computers stolen from the educational media lab in Gyte. On another occasion within the last three months, computers were stolen from within the vicinity of the first theft.

Due to these recent thefts, PUC is offering a $10,000 reward for any information leading to the arrest or conviction of the perpetrator.

Further information is being withheld to keep the investigation from falling into jeopardy, said Wes Lukoshus, assistant vice chancellor for advancement.

The campus police have not revealed any information in regards to tightening security on campus.

The case is currently under investigation and no suspects have been announced.

ADMINISTRATIVE UPDATE

Winter Weather

and decisions to cancel classes, close campus

Purdue Calumet has a procedure in place for making decisions to suspend classes and/or close the campus should it be deemed necessary in the interest of personal safety due to adverse weather conditions-or, for that matter, other sudden, unusual or unexpected circumstances.

The Chancellor, in consultation with the Vice Chancellor for Administrative Services, will decide when it is necessary to take such action.

The decision to interrupt normal campus operations means either of the following conditions is in effect:

"CLASSES ARE CANCELED"

This means that ALL classes scheduled to meet that particular day on campus or at the Academic Learning Center in Merrillville have been canceled, but university offices, departments and services remain open.

"THE UNIVERSITY IS CLOSED"

This means that NO on- and off-campus functions, services, programs and activities will take place that day. The campus is considered closed to all persons except those assisting in emergency operations. Consequently, all persons except emergency personnel are required to immediately leave the campus. No one will be permitted to return until normal campus operations are resumed. This requirement is necessary to ensure personal safety and to facilitate emergency operations such as snow removal.

So that all campus personnel affected by either of the above conditions can receive information promptly and accurately, official notification will be handled in the following manner:

Iran demands nationals' release from US custody

BBC NEWS

Iran has demanded that the US military immediately release five of its nationals detained in a raid in northern Iraq on Thursday.

Iran's foreign ministry says the men are diplomats and were working at the Iranian liaison office in Irbil.

US officials say they are linked to the Iranian Revolutionary Guard which they say trains and arms Iraqi insurgents.

The US has the authority to pursue Iranians in Iraq who "put our people at risk", a top US official has said.

"We are going to need to deal with what Iran is doing inside Iraq," said National Security Adviser Stephen Hadley on Sunday.

"We know there are jihadists moving from Syria into Iraq....We know also that Iran is supplying elements in Iraq that are attacking Iraqis and attacking our forces," he told ABC Television.

Tough stance

If Iranians in Iraq "are doing things that are putting our people at risk, of course we have the authority to go after them and protect our people," Mr Hadley said.

The US has often accused Iran, or factions within the Iranian government, of aiding Shia groups in Iraq militarily and politically, but has offered little proof of Tehran's alleged activities.

The latest raid followed a warning by President George W Bush on Wednesday that the US would take a tough stance towards Iran and Syria, whom he accused of destabilising Iraq.

Tehran vehemently denies the charges.

Iran's foreign ministry has said the detained men were "involved in consulate affairs".

"Their activities were legal and in the framework of the law," Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesman Mohammad Ali Hosseini said in response to the allegations.

The Iranian government has also demanded compensation for damage to the building where the men were seized.

'Illegal action'

Mr Hosseini said the building the Americans attacked opened in 1992 and was officially registered as the Iranian consulate. The Iraqi authorities have said it was a liaison office in the process of being registered as a consulate.

Iran is adamant the office and the staff inside should have had diplomatic protection and that America's action was illegal.

"What the Americans claim is incorrect. The Americans want to radicalise the atmosphere in Iraq to justify their occupation, but we will act wisely," he said.

Teheran has protested to the ambassadors of Iraq and Switzerland, which represents American interests in Iran.

Last month several Iranians were arrested by the US in Baghdad, among them two senior Revolutionary Guard officers. They were released after huge pressure from the Iraqi government.

The Revolutionary Guard, known locally as the Pasdaran, is a parallel military force with its own army, air force and navy.

It was set up to enforce and defend the principles of the 1979 Islamic revolution and answers directly to Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei.

This is embarrassing for PUC

Elizabeth Wilkinson
Managing Editor

When the news that the men's basketball season was cancelled broke, I knew it was going to be a bad thing. To have well over half the team ineligible is embarrassing for the team, athletic program and the university. I just never thought it would be such a big deal on a national level.

That's right; our little-team-that-couldn't is now on the national stage. Outside of stories in The Times and the Post-Tribune there has been a fairly wide distribution of this story on the internet and in large publications.

On December 30 the Chicago Tribune ran a small news story about the season being cancelled. The day before, a similar story ran on espn.com.

This was before it came to light that three players were ineligible last season but played any way, a revelation that lead to the resignation of athletic director Rob Jensen. It just keeps getting worse for the Peregrine athletic department.

The handful of news articles isn't what is the most embarrassing about this whole situation. In the world of blogging, we are a laughing-stock. Even the larger blogs are making fun of us for the world to see.

The AOL sports blog ran this headline "Purdue Calumet, which lacks the recruiting standards of Yale, cancels season."

To quote the story: "The administration has decided to cancel the rest of the season because the entire roster was dumb." They do follow up by saying that maybe the entire roster wasn't dumb, but over half were academically ineligible. They also describe a player who "....urinated on himself, scribbled on the wall in crayon and demanded a juice box." It's obviously a joke, but it is a humiliating one for everyone at PUC.

And this is only one of many, many gems mocking our former basketball team. Deadspin.com has a headline "How many of them could actually defeine [sic] Peregrine?"They link to an article about the cancellation that ran in USA Today.

Steve Rosenbloom, a columnist for the Chicago Sun-Times even gave us a shout-out in his January 12 blog on chicagosprts.com. "I didn't even know there was such a thing as the Purdue-Calumet basketball team, and now there isn't one."

This is embarrassing. I would much rather go to a school that no one has ever heard of, rather than one that is known for something like this. Student athletes accept a responsibility to be public faces for the university. Something like this is unacceptable and embarrassing for all of us.

I knew not of PUC's existence

Bradon Thomas
News Editor

Hammond In is not a typical college town and it is far from being an enjoyable place to live. PUC is in the middle of a dreary town.

I am a Hammond native, in a captured sense. I attended Gavit High School for 7 years, from 6 through 12 grades, before graduating in 2005. I myself live a minutes drive from the school. I did not know there was a college in Hammond until my senior year of high school.

Since I have received my license to drive, I have been trying to spend my time out of this town. I knew not of PUC's existence until I realized I would not be able to afford going to another school.

My inclination to escape this town can be understood by taking a stroll down Indianapolis Blvd on any given day. A person might notice a few gas stations, bars and maybe a couple of restaurants. What a person would not notice is any type of college atmosphere.

There has not been a single decent thing to do here for as long as I can remember. Why doesn't any one want to build a nice restaurant or movie theatre in this town?

There are students from different countries who only just experience Hammond in their time in the United States.

The university is here with 10,000 students and the next thing short of Highland or Munster is McDonald's, Arby's, and Papa John's Pizza. Maybe Carson Pirie Scott is a hopping good time for many of the people living in the area but I have to believe college students are reaching for a little more.

When I was 12 year old I had trouble finding things to keep myself occupied here, today it has not changed at all.

We are the Peregrines?

PUC has a huge opportunity in the wake of the men's basketball scandal. When all the smoke clears, this may turn out to be the defining moment in PUC history, be it positive or negative.

Students leave high school looking for that "college experience." Most students here say they didn't find it at PUC. They complain about the lack of "things to do" and absence of Greeks and dorms.

They also complain about athletics. We at The Chronicle have written several editorials about the lack of funding in athletics.

Student attendance at basketball games is poor at best and completely missing at worst. Sales of PUC merchandise at the bookstore pale in comparison to sales of Purdue merchandise, according to bookstore Manager Becky Birch.

But would more money put you in the seats? Would you learn the fight song and come to the pep rallies?

Probably not, right?

We are the Peregrines, but what does that mean? Right now, it means almost nothing.

Students, on the whole, aren't proud to be Peregrines. But that sense of pride is what creates the college experience. The buildings and dorms and better athletics and even better academics can all stem from that sense of pride.

The athletic department has made big strides in the last few years with the changing of the mascot, updating the program and establishing a solid marketing scheme. But it's all for naught if you're not responding. If you don't learn the fight song or come to the games or cheer for the mascots, it means nothing.

The tragedy of the 2006-2007 men's basketball team is chance to completely rebuild not just a basketball team but an athletic program and an entire school by instilling that sense of pride in the student body.

The missing piece of the college experience puzzle is not a football team or more on-campus housing or more "things to do," it's you and your participation.

So, let's take this chance to make PUC everything we wished it was. If you're not willing to help, that's fine. But stay out of the way and stop complaining because your choices directly affect those around you, even basketball players. Let's give the administration a reason to put more money into athletics and improving student life. Let's show them we care.

Bob Dylan may have said it best; "Your old road is rapidly aging. Please get out of the new one if you can't lend your hand, for the times they are a-changin'."

The Chronicle, in conjunction with some alumni, is calling for a pep rally to be held soon to build some PUC pride. Not for a game, but for a purpose. We'll sing the fight song and talk about starting anew. Come to the pep rally and help make it mean something to say, "WE ARE THE PEREGINES."

Head to the Region's finest Mexican restaurants

Isabel Rodriguez
Entertainment Editor

The Region is known for its melting pot diversity, and it's restaurants are no exception. The Region is home to Chinese, American, Indian, Japanese and Thai foods- but especially Mexican food.

From five star restaurants worth the long drive to the corner restaurant a few blocks from your house, Northwest Indiana offers some of the best Mexican food, especially these five places:

ABUELO'S
MEXICAN FOOD EMBASSY

This semi-new establishment brings Mexican/Tex Mex to a whole new level. Abuelos, located in Merriville, modernizes traditional Mexican dishes serving entrees with different spices resulting in outstanding new tastes. These entrees are best for the weak-stomached because they don't have the hottest spices and peppers used for flavor.

Abuelos offers the traditional entrées- tacos, burritos and carne asada- yet it's best known for its authentic cuisines' from different parts of Mexico. Coastal Mexico dishes like Salmon San Carlos and steak and enchiladas from Interior Mexico.

Award for best on the menu goes to the el paso burrito. Massive-sized flour tortilla filled your choice of seasoned beef, chile con carne or beans will satisfy your craving for Mexican food. Add a side of rice and beans to guarantee satisfaction for the emptiest of stomachs.

Have a sweet tooth? Try dessert nachos- delicious cinnamon nacho chips with vanilla ice cream, whipped cream and nuts.

Entering the doors of this Mexican food embassy may confuse you at first. The place is filled with a more modern feel of Mexico- elegant artifacts and chinaware adds a more expensive atmosphere compared to a local neighborhood joint.

If you enjoy a good drink, Abuelos also has a bar offering domestic beers and wines along with specialty drinks.

If you plan to dine, be sure to carry a decent amount of "dinero." Dinners start at $8.99 and go as high as $16.99.

Jalapenos

Unlike Abuelos, Jalapenos is known for making its Mexican food with the traditional flavors. Jalapenos, located in Schererville, is known its spicy, zesty dishes. This restaurant offers different types of tacos cooked numerous ways, adding to the uniqueness of its menu. Best on the menu goes to Rita's tacos- spicy-seasoned beef and cheese-filled flour tortillas fried until brown, creating an outer crunchy shell with a warm, soft flavor-filled middle full of piquant meat.

Although prices are high at this restaurant, their dinners are worth the few extra dollars. Try their tamales when you drop by for a dinner with the family. If you prefer mild food, tamales are your best choice for a delicious representation of Mexican cooking at its best. Their best-in-town chile rellenos (stuffed peppers) can be made with either cheese or your choice meat, served steaming hot along with beans and rice- all sprinkled with rancherito cheese.

Enter taco heaven with their taco bar for only $5.95. This buffet offers an array of meats including hard taco shells and soft corn or flour tortillas.

Spanish rice here is clearly in competition with Rancho Grande's. Both include steamed veggies, adding to the rich tastiness of the fluffed rice. Unlike Rancho Grande, Jalapenos offers two types of rice- Spanish and yellow rice (less mild, more herbs).

Try Jalapenos' sweet deserts, including caramelized bananas, flan and cheesecake.

Jalapenos' exterior adds to the feel of Old Mexico. Yet it's once you enter the restaurant you feel the atmosphere of Mexico. Dimmed lights and hand-carved wooden tables fill the common area of the restaurant while white Christmas lights hover above on a wooded canopy. Wooden booths surround the common area.

For directions to all the restaurants reviewed check out:

This small, hidden treasure offers Mexican dishes at a great affordable price, located next to Ultra Foods in Highland. What this restaurant may lack in appearance, it makes up for with entrées on the menu.

Tacos, burritos, seafood dishes, quesadillas, sopes, tostadas and tamales are some of the many dinners found on the menu with prices starting at $4.99. If you can't manage a large meal opt for the side orders which prove to be just as filling as a dinner. Rancho Grande also sells traditional Mexican drinks like Jarritos and Horrchata rice drink.

Tacos and quesadillas are most filling with condiments including lettuce and tomato wrapped in two tortillas.

If you're vegetarian, then you're just in luck. Rancho Grande offers veggie tacos- your choice of tortilla filled with cheese, onion, lettuce and avocado. Don't forget the side of its authentic, delicious Spanish rice- with bits of steamed-cooked carrots mixed well into the serving.

Tables are available for dine-in and carry-out is also an option.

Authentic Mexican Kitchen, Inc.

Leave it up to Chela's to give you a good home-cooked meal made with love, served by an enthusiastic waitstaff to ensure a relaxed and enjoyable dining experience. Chela's, located on 45th St. in Griffith, has a family-feel - no surprise because Marcela Salinas Martinez's family works throughout the establishment. Bright, colorful Mexican artifacts fill the walls of the restaurant along with family pictures hanging on the wall near the kitchen.

Chela's is known for its Pronto specials. These lunch specials include tamales and tacos starting at $5- a great deal compared to other restaurants in the area.

Caldo de Res (beef soup) wins the award for best soup in the area- served with beef, potatoes and rice simmered in a rich broth. Savory steak or lingua tacos equipped with fresh avocado, beans, cheese, lettuce and tomato make each bite better than the last. Try their large variety of enchiladas, served with suizas, poblanos, rojas or Mexican style. Have room for one piece of finger food? Grab a piece of Mexican bread on the way home.

A large bar with booths (both high and low) are located left of the entrance.

A party area in the lower level of the restaurant is available for banquets and parties, equipped with a dance floor and private bar.

Grab a few pieces of candy on the way out, located in a bowl right by the entrance.

EL TACO REAL

Located in Hammond, El Taco Real is known Region-wide for its authentic Mexican food. A long waiting line may greet you once arriving this small corner restaurant. However their entrees are worth the wait. Salsa and chips are first served to you (like traditional Mexican restaurants) yet they serve this appetizer with cubes of rancherito cheese and jalapeno peppers. Fresh pico de gallo is available upon request. Fajitas, tamales, enchiladas and quesadillas are best on the menu. Fajitas, cooked to perfection, arrive hot and sizzling to your table, along with serving of avocado, sour cream and salsa.

Try their delectable fried vanilla ice cream- a scoop of mouthwatering ice cream served in a hard, fried cinnamon shell.

Deep River Waterpark: Simply "skatetastic!"

Kristen Hannagan
Staff Writer

While most of us will not be competing in the next Olympic Winter Games, ice skating is still a fun way to get some exercise and to enjoy time with friends and family.

For the summer months, Deep River Waterpark is known throughout the area for being "Simply SplashTastic!". In the colder months, it could be said it is "Simply SkateTastic!"

Deep River Waterpark
9001 E. US Hwy 30 in Crown Point
(219) 947-7850
Visit them on the web at deepriverwaterpark.com

The waterpark provides an area for ice skating and a concession stand for its visitors. While the feel of summer is still around - with various water slides towering over the park and the US 30 Surf Shop selling sunglasses and beach apparel - it is easy to get into the spirit of skating.

The rink is on top of concrete and has a wooden bench in the middle providing tired skaters a place to take a break. The park also provides walker-esque stands for children to hang onto to get the feel of skating.

On a visit shortly after Christmas, the park had a decent amount of guests, ranging from families to groups of friends to couples. There were both first time skaters and experienced skaters - who skated backwards and even did handstands on the ice.

According to a flier available in the US30 Surf Shop, skating is available from Nov. 24 until Feb. 25 as long as the weather is suitable for skating. The park is open from 2 p.m to 9 p.m on Thursdays, 2 p.m to 10 p.m on Fridays , 12 p.m to 10 p.m on Saturdays and 12 p.m to 9 p.m on Sundays, and is closed Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Deep River Waterpark is not just for swimming. This summer park turns into an ice skating rink, making skating available until Feb. 25.

The cost for skating is $3 for skaters 14 and up and $2 for those under 14 and for seniors age 62 and up. The rates are a dollar lower if you go in a group of 10 or more (which you have to call ahead to make arrangements) or if you have a current Deer River Waterpark pass.

Skate rental is $4 for everyone. For groups or those who have a waterpark pass the price is $3. There is no charge if you're with a group and plan not to skate.

"Happily N'ever After" attempts to add wit to the original Cinderilla story.

Jade Lee Culberson
Senior Staff Writer

Predictable but cute, Director Paul J. Bolger's animated feature "Happily N'ever After" attempts to add sly wit to the Cinderella story and instead nearly succeeds as a shallow comedy of errors.

In Fairytale Land, stories – each running simultaneously – are overseen, on a crystal ball with a remote control, by a wizard (voiced by George Carlin) to assure that nothing gets in the way of the expected happy endings. Unfortunately, the wizard's assistants – Mambo (Andy Dick) and Munk (Wallace Shawn) – are bumbling idiots who are completely incapable of holding down the fort while the wizard takes a vacation just as Cinderella (Sarah Michelle Gellar) – now with short hair and called Ella – prepares for the ball.

In preparing to host the ball, the prince (Patrick Warburton) spends most of his time bumbling as well. This is hilarious at first – especially as we first see he's carrying an instruction book on how to be a prince – but boring long before the film is over. The hero of the film – and narrator – is Rick (Freddie Prinze Jr.), the prince's servant, who has a royal crush on Ella.

"Happily N'ever After" is the tale of what happens when Cinderella's evil stepmother, Frieda (Sigourney Weaver), tries to take over Fairytale Land – apparently in hopes of gaining power and scoring one for the "other side." Of course, she rallies all of Fairytale Land's bad guys for this task – including Rumplestiltskin (Michael McShane), three witches, a couple of Big Bad Wolves and a giant.

The film takes every conventional turn, delivering no surprises but some humorous (if forgettable) lines. Rated PG for some mild action and rude humor, "Happily N'ever After" is actually quite child-friendly and should give more than a few chuckles to the accompanying adults. The banter between Mambo and Munk is funny, and the Seven Dwarves have a few new quirks actually rather amusing.

"Happily N'ever After" neglects to do anything spectacularly, but it isn't outright bad – it's just not great. Save some money, and rent it when it's released to DVD.

Omarion grows up to be boring with '21'

Isabel Rodriguez
Entertainment Editor

R & B singer/songwriter Omarion released his latest CD "21"- a title symbolizing his coming of age and his breaking away from the teen-pop scene.

Finally on his sophomore album, Omarion finds a place in the music industry and really lets his musical expression come to life. "21" shows not only his adulthood initiating but his musical maturity reaching new grounds.

It's evident on this album of his journey slowly moving past the "sex-sells" persona - something many young artists use while breaking into mainstream music and media. Omarion digs deeper into finding new lyrics- going more explicit compared to his first album "O," released in 2005.

The step-worthy, smooth ballad "Entourage" marks Omarion's new style and flavor of

R & B mixes with lyrics reading "I don't need nobody else around see/ Love the way you compliment my style/ Though you may end up bein' my only girl/ Cause when your with me you're my whole world."

Enticing lyrics of "Icebox" and background vocals sing of past relationships affecting a new potential love. Upbeat tempos and Omarion's high vocals show his singing from his heart, giving his all energy in just one note.

The smoothest track on "21" has to be "Midnight," focusing on Omarion's slightly masculine voice instead of overpowering, repeated background vocals.

The only downside with this album is the tempos and beats- begging for some type of new instrument or sound to distinguish tracks on the album. ""Just Can't Let You Go" and "Entourage" sound too similar and give off the same energy-something that can't be repeated.

However, "Berg for it" comes out of nowhere.

Omarion gets credits for the lyrics on "Obsession" (the title tells the listener what to expect) but the beat revisits his past of "teen-pop" making listeners doubt his coming of a new age, and leaving behind his pop roots.

Each intro starts out unique, tricking a listener into believing they will hear something new. Only seconds into the track, they're surprised and greeted with a same, boring tempo.

This album is certainly borrow-worthy from a friend, to experience Omarion's new style for yourself.

Omarion feeds listeners with the same old boring music on "21."

Cancelled

The men's season came to an early end after 10 players were declared as academically ineligible.

university has to protect its academic integrity, so I understand both sides," said Friend in a phone interview.

Friend, who previously had 21 years of experience at PUC, has reluctantly come out of retirement to help.

"I was very happy with retirement; I was kayaking and planning on cross country skiing," said Friend. "I was flattered to be asked, but didn't seek the position."

According to Melinda Dalgarn, vice chancellor for student affairs, who will be coordinating the search for Jensen's successor, several steps to improve supervision of student-athletes will be put into practice immediately.

"It's clear that we fell far short in this area and we are taking immediate steps to address this important issue," said Dalgarn.

The certification of eligibility will be a function of the registrar's office and a formal academic monitoring protocol will be established. Also, a task force of faculty, staff, students and individuals from the community will be appointed to review the athletic program at PUC.

The last time a season was canceled at PUC was during the 1994-95 campaign, when the women's basketball season was canceled within the first weeks of play due to injuries, ailments, academic ineligibility and unexpected departures. However, Fanno said that the season cancellation was due mainly to injuries.

"There's a commitment to basketball here," said Friend. "If we have 800 students living on campus there's a need for intercollegiate sports, especially if we want to be considered as more than just a commuter campus."

Dalgarn said that a national search will begin this month for a new athletic director and assistant vice chancellor. The department is already receiving letters of interest from individuals regarding the coaching positions.

James could not be reached for comment.

Uncertain Future

much as Coach James took the fault, he did a lot to help."

According to Tustison, James did everything he possibly could to make sure the players were passing.

Tustison said James gave players progress reports to be filled out by professors. According to Thomas, the team was asked constantly about their progress and if they needed help. But several players dropped classes, putting them below the 12 hour requirement, without telling anyone.

"Every ineligible player had at least one F," said Tustison. "I was disgusted when I found out."

With the season now over and the team without a coaching staff, the recruiting class will be small.

"Recruiting is going to be hard," said Fanno. "By this time last year, we already had a few signed."

With no time frame to hire a new coach and players who may not return, the men's basketball program may miss out on a 2007-2008 season, too.

ADMINISTRATIVE UPDATE

offered for information about recent campus burglary/vandalism

Purdue Calumet is offering a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of individuals involved in a vandalistic campus break-in and burglary the weekend of Jan. 6-7.

Computer equipment and other belongings were reported missing following a break-in that occurred in offices and computer laboratories within the Anderson Building, Classroom Office Building and Gyte Annex at the northwest corner of campus, off Woodmar Avenue, south of 169th Street.

The break-in is the third to occur in a three-month period—all confined to the same general area of campus. Some $30,000 in equipment has been reported missing or damaged.

"We are intent on getting to the bottom of this matter," Purdue Calumet Police Chief Stephen Chaddock said. "By offering the reward, we hope to gain the necessary information that leads to the arrest and conviction to the fullest extent of the law of those individuals responsible for this senseless and irresponsible act."

Individuals with information to report are asked to contact Purdue Calumet's University Police at 219/989-2220.

"Offices and labs were broken into sometime late Saturday night (1/6) and during the early hours of Sunday (1/7)," Chaddock said. "The vandals apparently discharged fire extinguishers, which set off fire alarms in the Anderson Building around 3:30 in the morning."

Also in response, Chaddock said the university is taking measures to upgrade various aspects of its campus security system.

Spring intramurals underway

Joe Wielosinski
Staff Writer

"Turn Back the Clock Week" will offer students the chance to play marbles, kickball, dodgeball and rock, paper, scissors.

This spring a wide variety of sports and other activities will be offered for PUC students, including several new intramurals as well as some old favorites.

"We are offering all kinds of intramurals this semester. I feel there is something for just about everyone, even those who aren't into playing sports," said intramural sports coordinator Matt Dudzik.

Two of the new intramurals this spring include swimming and a "Turn Back the Clock Week," which will feature many different games that PUC students may have played when they were younger - dodgeball, kickball, marbles and paper, rock, scissors.

"I think that week will be a huge hit with students," said Dudzik. "Even those who are not very athletic will be able to be involved and have fun."

"Turn Back the Clock Week" will take place the week of Jan. 29 and the swimming event is scheduled for April at the Hammond YMCA.

Several intramurals that were popular in previous years will be returning as well, such as basketball, volleyball and wrestling. All are expected to bring large turnouts.

"Another sport we're expecting a lot of sign-ups for is soccer. It continues to grow every year and I think this will be its biggest year yet," said Dudzik.

Nick Kalwinski, a graduate student in business communication, is a constant participant of intramurals and is excited about this upcoming semester. He thinks there is something for everyone.

"I'm excited for bocce ball," said Kalwinski. "It has a cult-like following and I think that there will be a lot of strong support for it."

He also believes that Texas Hold 'Em will be a hit because this will be its third year and the games popularity continues to grow.

Intramurals are available for free to all fitness club members and those interested should sign up early because spots may fill up quickly.

The rash of big name injuries for the Miami Heat this season has not been limited to those on the court as Coach Pat Riley had his second surgery in two weeks Thursday. The Heat are expecting Shaq O'neal, Antoine Walker and James Posey back soon. Expect Miami to make a big push in the second half of the season.

The Hawks get Josh Smith back this week after he missed almost three weeks recovering from hernia surgery. He gives Atlanta a defensive presence in the paint, but don't expect him to improve this struggling team's record much.

Michigan Fab-Fiver Chris Webber agreed to terms with the Pistons last week, returning to his Detroit roots. C-Webb isn't what he used to be, but he can still make a good team better.

Cowboys receiver Terrell Owens had surgery Friday to repair a torn tendon in his right ring finger. Maybe he won't lead the league in drops next season.

Tony Gonzalez has agreed to a five-year contract extension with the Kansas City Chiefs that keeps him the highest-paid tight end in the NFL. But at 31, is he really worth it?

Oakland Raiders Defensive Coordinator Rob Ryan interviewed Friday for the team's head coaching job. The Raiders gave up the fewest passing yards in the NFL in 2006. It's a good move.

Cincinnati re-signed Robert Geathers Thursday after the defensive end finished the season with 10.5 sacks. If they bolster their defense this offseason, expect the Bengals to be serious contenders in 2007.

The Padres avoided arbitration with shortstop Khalil Greene on Friday, agreeing to a $2.25 million one-year contract. He might be the best young infielder in baseball.

Roger Clemens is choosing among returning to the Astros, retiring or rejoining the Yankees or Boston Red Sox, but he will be back.

The Colorado Rockies obtained right-hander Rodrigo Lopez from the Baltimore Orioles on Friday for two minor leaguers. Lopez' ERA was 5.90 last year. What will it be in Denver's thin air?

The Cubs on Friday added some infield depth with the signing of Tomas Perez to a minor-league contract. How about adding some depth in the outfield, starting rotation and bullpen?

Japanese left-hander Kei Igawa signed with the Yankees last week. He's no Matsuzaka, but he has a nice change-up and will fit the back of the rotation well.

Ladies lose in second half 69-44

Jessica Cochran
Sports Editor

Despite the Lady Peregrines desperately trying to get back into the game during the second half, their hopes were soon crushed when the final buzzer echoed across the gym.

The PUC women's basketball team (4-10, 0-1) traveled to Loyola University Saturday afternoon to compete against the Robert Morris Eagles (11-8, 2-0). It was an aggressive game from the tip off and the Lady Eagles took the win, 69-44.

"It didn't feel like a 25 point loss," said Head Coach Dennis Smith. "It felt like we were only a few lay-ups away."

A bad pass by the Lady Eagles within the first few minutes of the game gave senior center Jessica Hamman a chance for a fast-break and a lay-up to put PUC on the board. Hamman ended the night with 10 points, leading the Lady Peregrines.

PUC responded to the Lady Eagles every basket but were never able to take the lead.

The Lady Peregrines refused to fall more than three points behind on the scoreboard until the very last minute when a Robert Morris forward LaToya Jackson hit one from the corner to end the first half, 28-24.

PUC went into the locker room at halftime and came out 15 minutes later a different team, as Robert Morris took the court by storm and gained a quick 10 point lead.

"How about moving," said Smith during a timeout. "How about acting like you want to play."

"It didn't feel like a 25 point loss. It felt like we were only a few lay-ups away."
Lady Peregine Head Coach Dennis Smith

The Lady Peregrines managed to come back to within four points after quick baskets from junior guard Krystal Rigoni and sophomore forward LaKeisha Hurst.

PUC stepped up on defense and a frustrated Robert Morris began losing control and handing over steals to the Lady Peregrines. But Robert Morris refused to give up and soon took a 14 point lead.

"We just had some bad shooting, but we played a good team that had speed," said Smith.

Robert Morris put forth an aggressive game that left PUC hitting the floor hard. Shots weren't falling for the Lady Peregrines, and they struggled to penetrate the lane against a tough defense.

The Lady Eagles took a 25 point lead, the largest of the afternoon, and finished 69-44.

"We need to play two full halves instead of just one good first half or just one good second half. That seems to be our problem,"
